The original and progress of chymistry. The use of chymical medicaments. The usefulness of the peripatetic philosophy in reference to the practice of physick. The original and progress of anatomy. The first inventor of the circulation of the blood. The transfusion of blood [etc.]. 179 pp., 6 pl. sm. 4°. London, 1670.

The Lord Bacon's relation of the sweating sickness examined in a reply to George Thomson, pretender to physick and chymistry. Together with a defence of phlebotomy in general, and also particularly in the plague, small-pox, scurvy, and pleurisie. In opposition to the same author and the author of Medela medecine, Doctor Whitaker and Doctor Sydenham. Also, a relation concerning the strange symptoms happening upon the bite of an adder; and a reply by way of preface to the calumnies of Eccebolius Glanvill. pp. 27, 259, 11, 32. 4°. London, P. Brigs, 1671.

Stubbe [Stubbes or Stube] (Henry)—con.

An epistolary discourse concerning phlebotomy. In opposition to G. Thomson, pseudochymist, a pretended disciple of the Lord Verulam. Wherein the nature of the blood and the effects of blood-letting are enquired into and the practice thereof experimentally justified (according as it is used by judicious physicians) in the pest and pestilential diseases, in the small-pox, in the scurvy, in pleurisies, and in several other diseases. 4 p. l., 259 pp. 4°. London, 1671.
